To whom it may concern,

It is my pleasure to recommend Andrew Gerber to be included into your workforce. As a former co-worker, his diligence, honesty, and willingness to learn outweighed any other employee in his department. His dedication to the station and team impressed me very much.

I came to know Andrew when he began working at ABC12 in the production department. It was clear very early in his time here that he was a hard working individual, both on and off the clock. Andrew quickly picked up the language, techniques, and work habit needed to be successful in the evolving newsroom. In his department, Andrew was able to learn and exceed at several positions including graphics, audio, MCR. But he also took it a step further. Andrew went above the requirements and began learning in the Newsroom. Andrew expressed to me his interest with both shooting and editing, which he became self-taught on our equipment in his spare time. Later, he was able to begin shooting highlights for sports, which brought him praises not just from me, but also other members of the Newsroom Department.

Although Andrew had the opportunity to stay stagnant in our building, he was determined to face higher challenges and stronger competition. Andrew is not one to follow and be average. Andrew has shown time and time again that he is a natural leader and someone that will exceed any expectation you may have.

I would like to appreciate you my favorite considerations to him and, it would be a great pleasure for me to see him continue his work at your office. If there is any question regarding to his reference, please be free to contact me at any time.

Yours Sincerely,

Corey Alexander
